An advocate for the opportunity that exists at the intersection of social impact and economic development, Amy Millington has expertise in corporate philanthropy, nonprofit management, employee engagement, and impact investment.

With a career spanning both the private and nonprofit sector, Amy has consulted for social impact teams at PagerDuty and Sony Interactive Entertainment on projects ranging from strategy facilitation to program design and implementation. Prior to these roles, she worked for eBay Foundation for fifteen years, ultimately serving as president with responsibility for eBay's global philanthropic initiatives and overseeing its employee community engagement activities.

In her early career, Amy was responsible for managing an AmeriCorps program site in Oakland, CA for the education technology nonprofit NetDay. She has also worked for a policy research firm on evaluations of education and workforce development programs, and in fundraising and asset management for a nonprofit housing developer.

Amy has experience serving on nonprofit boards including the Greenbrook Education Fund and 1951 Coffee, a nonprofit social enterprise training and employing refugees in the coffee industry. Amy received a Master of Public Policy and a B.A. in English from the University of California, Berkeley. She resides in Danville with her husband George, two daughters Emmie and Cora, and their labradoodle Billie.
